

4 WAYS YOUR TEAMMATE CAN MAKE YOU MORE MONEY

No matter how much you love your job, enjoy the company of your colleagues, or revel in success, it is a very rare occasion where it is done for free.

Here are 4 ways that you can utilize your teammates to generate more income:

- Helping your teammates regularly leads to them also wanting to reciprocate the gesture, until eventually there is a sense of consistency with giving and giving back. This can lead to further opportunities for extra shifts, your effort being recognized by upper management and it also places you in the prime position for added tips.
- Everyone has unique talents and gifts, so by sharing what you are amazing at, you learn the ways in which others are also genius and can start incorporating new ways to be successful. When the strengths of the team are combined, things become harmonious and that is where the magic happens.
- Find out what your teammate dislikes and volunteer to do the dirty work which will inspire them to either find out what you love and give you more of it or find out what you also dislike and reciprocate the favor. A shift that is run more efficiently, provides further opportunity to impress upper management, the clientele you serve and your reward will be higher tips and an increased allocation of work hours.
- The saying “it’s not what you know, it’s who you know” applies here because if you are having open discussions with colleagues and employers about your goals and upskilling opportunities, you may find that they have golden information about leads you can follow to achieve those goals.